

Black Sigatoka in Haiti Learning Assessment

Short Answer

1. Why is there food insecurity in a country like Haiti where the soil is very fertile?
2. Is it possible to control the Black Sigatoka disease with the limited resources available in the country?
3. Why do certain fields have lower incidences of the Black Sigatoka disease than others?
4. To what extent has climate change contributed towards the proliferation of the disease in Haiti?
5. How challenging will it be to get all the planters within the community to participate in the integrated control of the disease?
6. What are the roles of extension services in supporting plantain growers in improving and managing their crops and its impact on the community?